

Future Five: Defend the Nation while improving the military:

As China continues to grow in numbers and power, the United States may not seem like the world super power it was in the '80s and '90s. Instead of dealing with countries all the way around the world, instead we should keep all of our troops stationed at home, and improve military spending, specifically through technology advancement. We should stop all immigration from Mexico, legal and illegal. With the decrease of foreign races, there will be more sufficient job opportunities at home. Additionally, there would be a nation-wide full crackdown on current illegal aliens living in the United States. Anyone found not living legally here would be promptly deported. The United States is currently worrying too much about other countries while we should be vastly more concerned with our own countries military power and illegal immigrants.
